THE HISTORY BEHIND BIRTHDAY CAKES AND CUSTOMS

by Lynne Adams Barzé

Ever wonder if there was a beginning to birthday parties, candles, cakes and presents? Most of the time it is just taken for granted because it all starts exactly twelve months after the day we are born. Consequently, we grow up with the idea and feel it has always been. But everything has a beginning and a history.

According to giveagift.net, birthday celebrations vary by culture. As early as Roman times, celebratory traditions, some pagan, were adapted to recognize the annual event of an individual's date of birth. And, like other holidays we celebrate today such as Mardi Gras and Christmas, some have religious origins.

In early days of Christianity, many children were given the names of martyrs or those thought to have conducted themselves in exemplary religious ways. Those persons would celebrate his or her "name day" rather than "birth day".

Then there are also other cultures that do not celebrate birthdays at all because of one or the other of these origins.

In researching the history of birthday gifts, this same site stated that the custom began with presents acting as good wishes and symbolic tools to ward off evil spirits. In early Europe, it was believed that evil would haunt royalty on their birthday. Friends would gather around the celebrant and offer good wishes which later morphed into pleasant, happy presents to symbolically ward off harm from bad spirits.

These gatherings turned into birthday parties.

Rich Coffman is a Colorado blogger under the name of "bravodeluxe" and published an informative study on the history of the birthday cake.

Though many cultures have baked commemorative breads and cakes for thousands of years, the current fashion of birthday cake is believed to have been started in Germany in the 1400's. Before then cakes were primarily marketed for wedding celebrations. However, they were still mainly for the wealthy.

Thanks to the Industrial Revolution, 1712-1942, with the advancement and proliferation of technology and materials, celebratory cakes became cheaper and more easily produced. This made them affordable for the average family.

The tradition of lighting birthday candles on the cake goes back thousands of years and is rooted in Greek Mythology. The Greek goddess Artemis was celebrated for her association with the moon and a successful hunt. She was said to live in a cave and cakes brought to her in appreciation were lit with many candles to provide light.

A lot of ancient cultures and religions believed smoke carried their prayers up to the gods and possibly supports our "make a wish" tradition.

In the 1700's the Germans began the custom of putting one candle on the cake for each year in the age of the celebrant and extra ones for good wishes of many years to come.

Even though cakes, candles and gifts are a part of our tradition in the United States and many other countries, some cultures have very unique customs.

In South America dancing the waltz is incorporated into the celebration. In Mexico, Cuba, and Panama it is traditional to incorporate piñatas into the party. Still others require special attire to be worn by the birthday boy or girl.

Whatever the style or history, it is quite evident the world believes the day someone is born is an important date to celebrate.

Saying Goodbye to Brigadier General John Hawkins Napier III

By Don Wicks

Scholar, Soldier, Historian, Benefactor, and Gentleman, General John Hawkins Napier III died on Thursday, December 27, 2016.

Raised in California, where his father served as Educator, the family made many trips to Picayune, Mississippi, to visit family before moving here permanently.

Eastman F. Tate, John's grandfather on his mother's side was a two time Mayor of Picayune, Mississippi, and founded the Picayune Item and the Bank of Picayune on the same day in 1904.

His grandfather Napier was attorney for Poplarville, Mississippi, and his father became Superintendent of Picayune Schools. John fell in love with Picayune and during a brief stay before finishing his tour in the Marines, he was a substitute teacher and the first sports editor of the Picayune Item as well as a member of the American Legion and the Jaycees.

Thus began his many articles on local history that continued until his death. He is best known for his complete and concise history: "Lower Pearl River's Piney Woods, Its Land and Its People" which is now out of print. Fifty-two of his articles as well as a "Brief History of Picayune" have been published and are available at Picayune Main Street.

John received degrees at Pomona College in California, the University of Mississippi with a History Degree, an MA at Auburn University. He received his Air Force Commission in 1949, and when the Korean War began, he was launched in a 27 year military career culminating as a Brigadier General.

General Napier is survived by his wife, Cameron Mayson Freeman Napier, long time Regent of the First Confederate White House. The couple has spent their remaining years at Kilmahew Plantation in Ramer, Alabama.
